A Requiem. BY F. M. E.

Breathe low, thou gentle wind, Breathe soft and low; The beautiful lies dead! The joy of life is fled! And my lone heart is wed Henceforth to woe! That thou should'st droop and die

At early morn! While yet thy graceful dew, A jovons fragrance drew From every flower that grew Life's path along!

The green earth mourns for thee, Thou dearest one ! A plaintive tone is heard And flower that leaflet stirred, And ev'ry fav'rite bird Sings sad and lone!

Pale is thy brow, and dimm'd Thy sparkling eye! Affection's sweetest token Is lost fore'er and broken The last kind word is spoken-Why did st thou die!

Breathe low, thou gentle wind, Breathe soft and low; The beautiful lies dead! The joy of life is fled! And my lone heart is wed Henceforth to woe! Boston, July, 1848.

The Beautiful Legend.

We find in a late sermon of Theodore Parker, the following story. The subject of the discourse is 'rest:' . They tell a story that one day Rabbi Judah and his brethren, the seven pillars of wisdom, sat in the Court of the Temple on feast day disputing about rest. vet without sin. The second, that it was fame and praise of all men. The third, that it was the possession of power to rule the state. The fourth, that it consisted only of a happy home. The fifth, that it must only be in the old age of one who is rich, powerful, famous, surrounded by children and children's children. The sixth said that all were vain unless a man keep all the ritual law of Moses. And Rabbi Judah, the venerable, the tallest of the brothers, said - Ye have spoken wisely, but one thing more is necessary, he can only find rest, who to all these things addeth this, that he keepeth the tradition of the elders.'

'There sat in the Court a fair haired boy, playing with lillies in his lap, and hearing the talk, dropped them in astonishment from his hands, and looked up -that boy of twelve-and said-'Nay, nay, fathers, fellow creatures he is always PLEASED when the poor he only loveth rest, who loves his brother as himself, and God with his whole heart and soul. He is greater than fame, and wealth, and power, happier than a happy home, happy without it, better than honored age, he is a law to himself and above all tradition." The doctors were astonished. They said-'when Christ cometh, shall be tell us greater things?' And they thanked God, for they said-the old men are not always wise, yet God be praised that out of the mouth of this young suckling, has His praise become perfect.'

Narrow Escape from Mexican Light-

A surgeon in the army of the United States writes en route from Mexico to Vera Cruz, three miles from Jalapa, on the 18th ultimo. He describes the following remarkable scene :

A singular accident happened to us near the end of January: our first day's march from Puebla. The clouds gathered in the mountains to our right, and the distant thunder warned us that the usual afternoon's rain would soon be upon us. We were within a half mile February: of camp when the rain overtook us. The lightning descended to the earth in vivid columns, followed quickly by sharp reports of thunder. I was riding in the rear, close up with the troops, in company with March: another officer. I felt a sudden bewilderment as in some stunning shock had raised me in the air, then all consciousness was gone. Some officers aroused April: me from my stupor, by asking if I was burt. In a few seconds my senses returned, when I found myself upon the ground enveloped in my cloak, with my hands clasped on the back of my neck, where I had a severe pain. I was asked what could be done for I me, as well as the soldiers. My eyes were then turned upon the regiment. It was a most appalling sight to behold. One entire company was stricken to the June: earth, their arms in irregular heaps beside them. It had more the appearance of a battle-field that had been raked by an enemy's battery, than any other scene I can compare it with, except that it was more terrible. Although I could not move at the instant, I was sufficiently collected to give directions for their restoration. Very soon I was able to go to them, and was rejoiced to find most of them shocked only by the electric fluid running along the ground. Capt. Wood and two scargents were more severely injured. The captain was bleeding from the nose and mouth, and perfectly unconscious of everything around him. One said that it was to have attained sufficient wealth, One sergeant did not breathe for a minute, and then it was with a convulsive effort, and at long intervals. Some men had their boots torn off-others were struck in an arm or leg only. My only remedy was the free use of cold water, thrown suddenly over the head and face. Fortunately, all are now well, and no one suffers from its effects but my friend Wood, whose face remains black and blue, from the eyes to the tip of
